COMPUTER INTEGRATED MANUFACTURING SYSTEMS

Index to Volume 6 Numbers 1–4

1993

Title Index

Addressing design and control issues of AGV-based FMSs with Petri net aided simulation 125
Another look at uncertainty and risk management when evaluating manufacturing technology 229
Attributes of a discrete cell control system 176
Computer integrated process systems in continuous manufacturing industries 259
Computer-supported workplace for the production manager – a tool for preparing strategic decisions 161
Concept sketching for the next generation of machine production information systems 135
Database model for hierarchical control of manufacturing cell systems in a manufacturing shop 185
Definition of generic relationships between design and manufacturing information for generative process planning 204
Determination of manufacturing technologies based on business strategies 103
Economics of batch manufacture 109
ICAPP: A process planning system for the CIM environment 235
Identification of metrics and transition functions of pull system implementation 117
Increasing efficiency of assembly lines through computer integration, dynamic balancing and wage incentive 272
Information system architecture for heterarchical control of large FMSs 76
Inherently flexible cell communications: A review 243
Integrative approach for a functional specification of FMS control 219
Modelling and justifying discrete production processes by Petri nets 27
Multiactivity paradigm for the design and coordination of FMSs 195
New technological and organizational solutions to shopfloor control 44
Operation of AGVs using information derived from encoded tiles 167
Set-up reduction in PCB automated assembly 18
Shopfloor programming – a concept supporting skill-based manufacturing 36
State space approach to qualitative analysis of FMSs 9
The govern-for-flexibility of manfacturing facilities: an explanatory example 149
Tool flow planning in a flexible manufacturing system 93
Use of CNC and alternative methods of work organization 3
